Brendon Urie

The Panic! at the Disco frontman, 31, just dropped the rock band’s sixth studio album, Pray for the Wicked.

Your last album had a Frank Sinatra vibe. What was your inspiration this time?
When I was a kid, I would make a cardboard cutout of a guitar and act like a rock star in front of a mirror. I’m reflecting on those memories.

So, what advice would you give your younger self?
You know what you want and who you are: Don’t second-guess it, man!

You starred in Kinky Boots last year. What did you learn on Broadway?
It absolutely influenced my writing and the recording. And vocally I was able to do a lot of weird stuff I never thought I could accomplish.

How did you spend your last day off?
I woke up and made breakfast for my wife [Sarah], then we just stayed home all day and binged The Office on Netflix. —JEFF NELSON

Loving America

Every year we look forward to putting together this issue, taking a moment around July 4 to celebrate 100 Reasons to Love America. Despite our differences, we can all agree that Popeyes' fried chicken is amazing! But this year, even as we celebrate what's great about America, we are also grappling with the nightmare unfolding at our nation's border, where children are being separated from their parents, the result of the Trump administration's immigration policy. It's a heartbreaking and infuriating situation, but the abundant protests across the political spectrum—Laura Bush has condemned the policy as "immoral"—remind us that compassion remains a core American value and that our nation's strength lies in our sacred right to speak out and fight against injustice.

THE QUEEN IS ALL SMILES WITH MEGHAN

Chester, England, June 14

Meghan Markle (in custom Givenchy) bonded with Queen Elizabeth during her first royal outing without Prince Harry. The new Duchess of Sussex "was really calm, considering it was her first official engagement with the boss!" says Andrew Curphey, whose theater company brought together local schoolkids for a performance.

Prince Harry and Meghan (in Oscar de la Renta) attended the June 16 wedding of Princess Diana's niece Celia McCorquodale at St. Andrew and St. Mary's Church in Rochford, Lincolnshire.

MEGHAN'S DAD SPEAKS OUT

One month after Thomas Markle missed his daughter's royal wedding, he appeared on Good Morning Britain to address the photos he staged for the paparazzi before the nuptials. "I was looking to change my image, and obviously that was a mistake that went wrong," he said on June 18. "I spoke to them both and I apologized. . . . Both Harry and Meghan were very forgiving."

SEVENTH HEAVEN!

James Van Der Beek and wife Kimberly welcomed their fifth child just in time for Father's Day. Their daughter Gwendolyn was born June 15 at their home with a doctor and a midwife on hand. The newborn joins older siblings (from left) Emilia, 2, Annabel Leah, 4, Joshua, 6, and Olivia, 7½.

Jeff Goldblum, 65, celebrated Father's Day early, posing with wife Emilie Livingston, son Charlie, 2, and daughter River, 1, when he got his star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame on June 14.

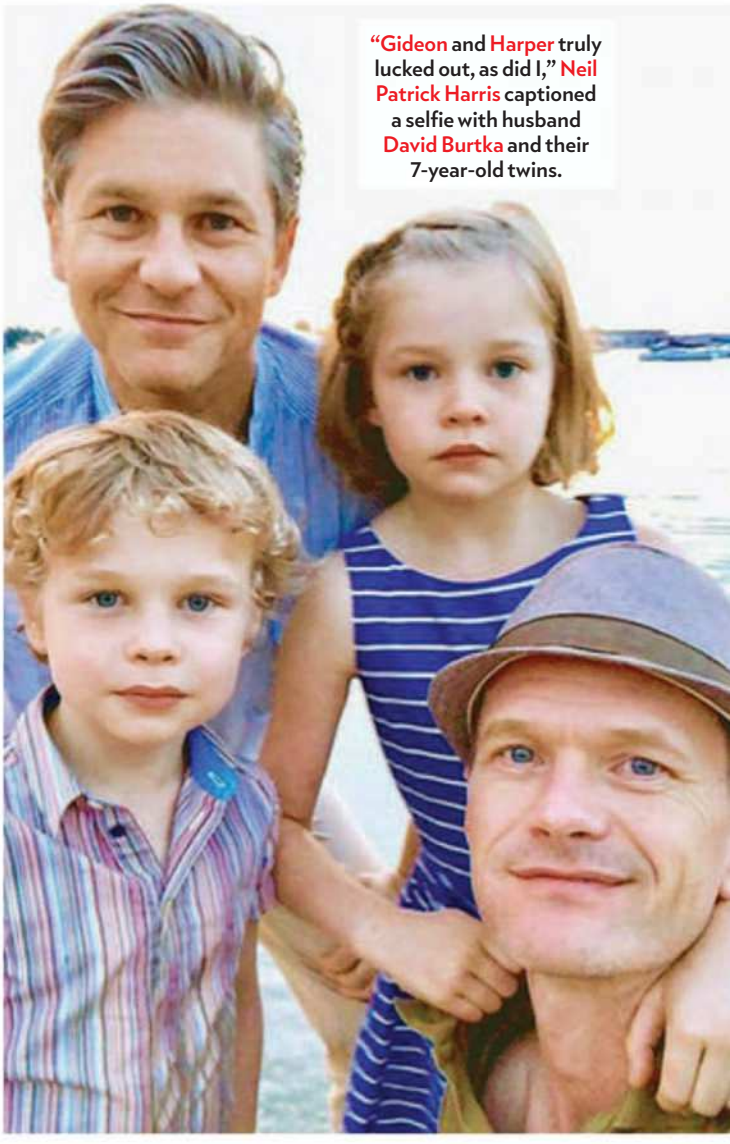
FATHER'S DAY JOY!

Chrissy Teigen honored husband John Legend on Instagram. "Thank you for the beautiful life and these beautiful lives you have given me," she wrote of the singer, with daughter Luna, 2, and son Miles, whom they welcomed in May.



"Gideon and Harper truly lucked out, as did I," Neil Patrick Harris captioned a selfie with husband David Burtka and their 7-year-old twins.

Michael Phelps celebrated Father's Day alongside his two sons with wife Nicole: Boomer, 2, and Beckett, 4 months.

Angelina Jolie & Brad Pitt

Custody Battle Explodes

ON FATHER'S DAY BRAD PITT RECEIVED the gift he's been craving most of all—more time with his kids. The actor, 54, spent the day in London with several of his and estranged wife Angelina Jolie's six children after a judge ruled that Pitt needed the chance to mend his relationship with them. The judge set specific visitation and phone guidelines for Pax, 14, Zahara, 13, Shiloh, 12, and 9-year-old twins Vivienne and Knox to spend time with Pitt over the summer while their mom, Jolie, 43, films Maleficent 2 in London. (Maddox, 16, is free to decide how much time he spends with each parent because of his age.) "Brad must be ecstatic that he finally gets to spend more time with his kids," a source says. "It's been obvious that he has been missing his kids like crazy." The June 6 court papers, obtained by People, state that "the children not having a relationship with their father is harmful to them" and that Jolie could even be in danger of losing full custody "if the Minor Children remain closed down to their father." With the new schedule, the kids will mostly be alternating between their parents until the next hearing the week of Aug. 13. Previously Pitt "had only been seeing the kids a few hours a week," says the source. "He must be so relieved that the court is now helping him."

The exes had to go to court because they couldn't agree on custody terms in their private divorce mediation—a surprising turn in what had been a peaceful process for the past year. Now what began as a contentious split when Jolie filed in 2016 is going through another ugly patch. Last week a spokesperson for Jolie released a statement saying, "This misleading leak is not in the best interests of the children. From the start, Angelina has been focused only on their health and needs, which is why it was so important that this last court hearing be conducted privately." After that, both sides retreated to their corners, with Pitt enjoying his time with the kids in London before heading to L.A. to begin filming Once Upon a Time in Hollywood, about the Charles Manson murders. Meanwhile Jolie spent Father Day's weekend visiting families in Iraq as part of her work with the United Nations. Seeing their struggles seemed to provide perspective. "People here have lost everything," she said. "They are destitute. They have no medicine for their children, and many have no running water or basic services." Despite the latest difficulties, "Angie is doing great and is focusing on her work," says another source. "The children are proud of their mom. She teaches them to focus on others, not on their own troubles." —MIA McNIECE, with Pernilla Cedenheim

More Than Friends?

He's been traveling the world promoting his movie Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom, but on June 17 Chris Pratt made time to have a quiet picnic lunch with Katherine Schwarzenegger—Arnold Schwarzenegger and Maria Shriver's oldest child—in Santa Barbara on Father's Day. Pratt, 39, and author-blogger Schwarzenegger, 28, who both belong to the Hillsong Church in L.A. (where Pratt had attended services earlier in the day), shared sandwiches and laughs during Pratt's first Father's Day since he split last August with wife Anna Faris, with whom he shares custody of son Jack, 5. Reps for Pratt and Schwarzenegger haven't commented on the nature of their relationship.

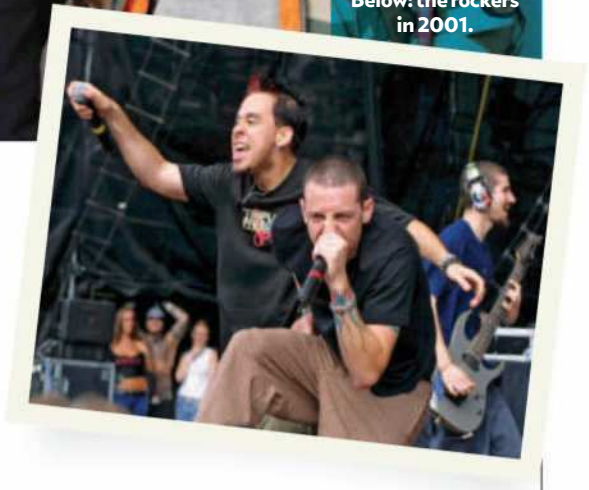
Linkin Park's Mike Shinoda

Remembering My Friend Chester Bennington

Gone Too Soon Bennington (far left) and Shinoda (in 2017) cofounded Linkin Park in 1996. "The stories and memories—we'll always have those," says Shinoda. Below: the rockers in 2001.



After his friend and bandmate Chester Bennington died of suicide almost a year ago, Linkin Park guitarist Mike Shinoda channeled his grief into art. "I was anxious about going in the studio at first. Then, once I got in, it was a really cathartic thing. Music just started pouring out of me," says Shinoda, 41. The result: Post Traumatic, the rocker's debut solo effort. The album, out now, doubles as an outlet for his grief and an homage to Bennington, who struggled with depression and substance abuse before he died at 41.

> 'HE WAS A GREAT SINGER AND A GOOD FRIEND' —SHINODA ON BENNINGTON

"I was writing all this stuff the way I was processing it," Shinoda says of the autobiographical record. "I think that's therapeutic, in the long run."

Shinoda also went into art therapy and relied on his friends, bandmates and his wife, Anna, for support after Bennington's death. Now he's hoping his new music will add to the growing conversation surrounding mental health.

"We can do some powerful things," says Shinoda. "I think too many people are embarrassed and don't want to [get help] because they feel weak. I hope we get to a point where that's not really the norm." Though the future of Linkin Park is uncertain, Shinoda says he and the alt-rock act will always be there for Bennington's six children and wife Talinda: "All the guys and her and the kids, we're all a big family."

How I'm Raising My Boys as a Modern Mom

Zoe Saldana, 40, and husband Marco Perego-Saldana, 39, don't want their three sons influenced by old-fashioned stereotypes. "The whole thing about 'daddy's little girl' and 'mama's boys'—my husband and I find that completely ludicrous and absolutely unhealthy," says Saldana, mom to twins Bowie and Cy, 3, and 1-year-old Zen. "You're giving them a very limited view on what female and male roles are supposed to be. We're raising our kids in a very gender-fluid environment." The Avatar and Guardians of the Galaxy star and her artist husband also like to trade off parenting styles. "He's the bad cop, I'm the good cop and vice versa," she says, "because we stand as a unit." —GRACE GAVILANES

Marsha Mason
From Goodbye Girl to Grace and Frankie

1977
"It was a big period in my life," says Mason, who starred opposite Richard Dreyfuss in The Goodbye Girl.

Marsha Mason didn't plan on a career in Hollywood. "I only thought about the theater," says the actress, who scored her breakout role in 1973's Cinderella Liberty while working at the American Conservatory Theater in San Francisco. "I never planned a movie career. It was totally serendipitous." In the next 10 years Mason, now 76, earned four Oscar nods for her work, including The Goodbye Girl. She also married and split from screenwriter Neil Simon. "We divorced, and I didn't know what I wanted to do," she admits. The St. Louis native focused on car-racing—a hobby introduced to her by pal Paul Newman—and tending to her New Mexico farm. But in 2014 she moved back to the East Coast. She has since appeared on Netflix's Grace and Frankie and ABC's The Middle—and loves the new attention. "I was at the Tonys, and two men came up to me and said, 'We love you on The Middle! Can we take your picture?'" she says. "I thought, 'Well, you finally broke through.'" —DANA ROSE FALCONE

Jeff Lewis is in a legal battle with his surrogate. Alexandra Trent—who gave birth to Lewis and partner Gage Edward's daughter Monroe, 19 months—has sued the star of Bravo's Flipping Out for comments he made about her body and for airing the delivery on his show allegedly without her consent. Lewis, 48, tells People, "Her appearance…was part of the surrogacy agreement, because the whole idea was to document this journey." —AILI NAHAS with Dave Quinn

Rock, 43 (inset, with brother Chris and his family in 2003), is on tour now.

Tony Rock Life in America's Funniest Family

You're one of eight siblings. Why did you and your brothers Chris, 53, and Jordan, 27, all get into comedy?
We weren't rich by any means, but we had each other. When you don't have a lot, it fuels creativity. It manifested in us doing characters of people in the neighborhood or doing impersonations of Mom and Dad. The comedy bug takes over.

What has it been like taking Jordan on tour with you?
The best part of my career is working with Jordan. I've been there his entire life, and now I get to watch him kill a room.

Does Chris give you advice?
Chris is pretty much, "We gotta do it on our own." He's just as quiet with us as he is with the rest of the world.

How does doing stand-up on your Tony Rock Live! tour compare to working on TV shows like BET's Black Card Revoked?
Stand-up's the first love, but I love playing in both worlds. I learn a lot in both.

Why I Care
PERSONAL STORIES ABOUT GIVING BACK

In September 2017 I was asked to perform a monologue at the Ava's Heart Foundation's 2nd Annual Heroes Ball. It's a fund-raising night that honors individuals and organizations that have helped people receive the gift of life. The monologue was about a woman who had to make the decision to give her son's organs away because he was going to die. As an organ donor myself, the image of my vibrant beating heart in someone else's chest would give me a little bit of peace.

I spoke to the founder, Ava Kaufman, who told me her own story. In 2009 she was feeling like a healthy person, but suddenly, after experiencing itching and having her hands swell, she was diagnosed with dermatomyositis, an inflammatory disorder, and needed a heart transplant. At this year's gala in September I think I'm going to sing. The event is intense but also entertaining and educational—you get to meet all these people, and it puts a face on the stories. —REPORTED BY NICOLE SANDS

MOVIE | Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom

What's worse than a bull in a china shop? A dinosaur in a house

FANTASY The dinosaurs of Jurassic World can't win for losing. Resurrected from the DNA of their extinct ancestors (a.k.a. fossils), they've been reduced to theme-park attractions for tourists, investment opportunities for venture capitalists and, if you're a smart velociraptor, a dog substitute for dino wrangler Owen Grady (Chris Pratt). Now their island habitat is disappearing beneath lava, and only a few species will be handpicked to be flown out—the final indignity—in cargo. But in the surprising and ingenious Fallen World, the dinosaurs finally come within evolutionary striking distance of those Planet of the Apes monkeys. On the mainland they're locked up in the basement of a mansion that could easily house a few Pleistocene-era woolly mammoths—until, oops, they get out. It's a kick to watch them knocking oil portraits from walls, breaking fancy vitrines and crushing bedroom furniture. Director J.A. Bayona has given a real jolt to the franchise, but he's also added a delicate strand of human emotion in the form of a mysterious little girl (Isabella Sermon) with wide, sad eyes and a curiously thoughtful approach to bioethics. (In theaters June 22, PG-13)

A superhero with a shortening fuse

FANTASY In season 2 Luke (Mike Colter) is starting to let this whole vigilante-superhero thing get under his bulletproof skin: What do the police care if he takes the law into his own hands when he does it so well? And why won't friends stop pushing him to monetize his brand? ("Just 'cause you're a woke superhero," he's told, "don't mean you gotta be a broke superhero.") His head—which at times one suspects is as thick as his muscles—may not be in the right place to take on impressive new villain Bushmaster (Mustafa Shakir) or conniving power player Mariah Dillard (Alfre Woodard, crisp as paper money). The fight scenes are good and bloody. (Launches June 22)

The hellacious goings-on heat up again

FANTASY Tulip (gorgeously cool Ruth Negga) is in a bad place at the start of season 3—she's on the cusp of eternal death—but then no one's ever sitting pretty on this rollickingly peculiar series. Jesse (Dominic Cooper) is relying on his decrepit grandma (Betty Buckley, in a sinister wig) to pull some supernatural strings and haul Tulip up from the underworld. For the moment she waits things out in purgatory: It's a stage set on which her life is being reenacted under the uncaring eyes of a cat clock. The real estate developer, 42, is back with his CNBC reality show The Deed.

What's season 2 going to teach us about property investment?
This season is so much better. It's not so much like we're trying to save the flipper, it's almost like we're teaching them the process and financial literacy.

But the goal is still the same.
[You'll know] what to do when you want to either buy your first home, or if you want to get into the flipping business. And it gives you lessons that won't cost anything.

How's The Deed different from those other house-flipping series?
This is my money. I'm investing in people who can't get the loan from the bank, don't have the income or the paperwork to support it. It's risky for me, but it sets the stakes.

Sometimes you have to work at a relationship

COMEDY This is that rare, welcome example of a romantic comedy that's just cute enough—the coincidences, the twists, the setbacks and even the happy twinning of hearts are all done with a light, even touch. Before we notice, we're disarmed and charmed. Harper and Charlie (Zoey Deutch and Glen Powell), assistants to two relentlessly busy Manhattan hotshots (Lucy Liu and Taye Diggs), plot to have their bosses fall in love and (in theory) spend less time making demands of staff. But will Cupid get the memo? It's sort of like The Parent Trap with attractive young professionals. (Now streaming)

The Best New Books

A widower reexamines his marriage, an anxious author opens up, and a Greenwich Village girl finds herself spying for the CIA

Edited by Kim Hubbard

book of the week

Katharine Dion
The Dependents

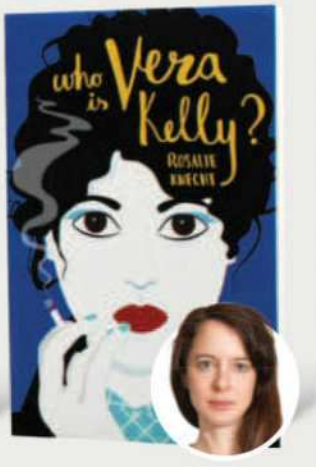
NOVEL

This is the beach read you'll still be thinking about as the leaves fall. After his wife, Maida, dies, retiree Gene Ashe's grief is tempered with anger; he feels abandoned. Amid hints that Maida was not as content as he was, except perhaps at the New Hampshire lake house where they vacationed with their best friends, Ed and Gayle Donnelly, Gene reconsiders their 49-year marriage. Debut novelist Dion writes like a dream. Or John Cheever crossed with a very insightful feminist.

Amanda Stern
Little Panic

MEMOIR

Stern's brave, fiercely funny memoir chronicles her years of living with an untreated panic disorder. Tormented by irrational fears that everyone she loves will leave her or die, she desperately test-drives doctors, boyfriends and drugs until she finds the right therapist—whose diagnosis and treatment help her not just survive but thrive. A brilliant read that offers hope for anyone burdened by anxiety.



Rosalie Knecht
Who Is Vera Kelly?

NOVEL

This splendid genre-pushing thriller alternates between Vera's 1966 CIA spy exploits in Buenos Aires and the lonely upbringing that got her there. A fractured family and her fitful coming-out in the repressive '50s primed Vera for a life of deception—but in Knecht's expert hands she's smart and complicated, yearning for connection in a tumultuous world.

100 REASONS to LOVE AMERICA

The easy chemistry between Faith Hill and Tim McGraw—after 21 years of marriage, no less—is an inspiration to us all. Why their joy is contagious, plus 99 MORE REASONS to treasure our freedom, savor small things and feel good this Fourth of July

FALLING IN LOVE ALL OVER AGAIN

STILL CRAZY (IN LOVE) AFTER ALL THESE YEARS: COUNTRY'S POWER COUPLE CONTINUE TO TOP THE CHARTS AND HEAT UP THE STAGE WHILE MASTERING THE ART OF A MARRIAGE IN THE SPOTLIGHT

By EILEEN FINAN

It's moments before Tim and Faith take the stage on the June 14 New York stop of their Soul2Soul tour, and opener Caitlyn Smith senses the crowd's amorous mood: "I hope a lot of babies are made after the show," the singer jokes before wrapping her set. Chances seem good—one fan pops the question to his girlfriend, eliciting cheers from fellow concert-goers. When at last the country couple take the stage, staring intently at each other while singing "It's Your Love," the concert kicks into full aphrodisiac attack. "I watch him perform, and to this day I'm still awed by it," says Hill, trying her best to keep it professional after she and McGraw leave the stage on June 18. Adds McGraw: "I am still blown away by her voice.... I could listen to her sing all night." Their preshow ritual is predictably down-to-earth—"Tim and I share a quick quiet moment together before hitting the stage. Always praying," Hill says—but once the show begins, the mood gets considerably steamier. "Watching Tim and Faith onstage is like two hours of total foreplay," says Holly Gleason, a music writer and McGraw's former publicist. "It's sexy, it's adult."

It's also, after two decades of wedded bliss, deeply impressive. Country's longest-reigning power couple are proving that at the age of 50 (Hill) and 51 (McGraw), they can still make sparks fly long after McGraw's proposal in 1996, when he asked her to marry him just before taking the stage at a music festival (he returned to her "Yes" answer written on his dressing-room mirror). "It's such a rare thing to be able to experience what we do for a living, and to do it together really feels like all the moments are special," says McGraw. And they continue to surprise, releasing their first album of duets, The Rest of Our Life, last November, just a month after their 21st wedding anniversary. Onstage at the New York concert, McGraw and Hill danced and flirted ("Look at those pants!" Tim teased his wife about her sleek ensemble) and lingered over their final kiss while sitting in chairs floating above the arena, hand in hand, legs intertwined, like a couple in the first flush of love. Though Hill says "a lot has changed" since those early years, it wasn't such a different scene from the two singers who first fell for each other on the aptly named Spontaneous Combustion tour, when they were "just kids and grossly, grossly in love," McGraw once told People. "It would make anyone sick! At the risk of sounding even more disgusting, we still feel that way."

Both Hill and McGraw were already stars when they began dating, but their marriage in October 1996 "poured gasoline" on their careers, McGraw has said. In 2000 they were the Country Music Association's male and female vocalists of the year, and with chart-toppers like their duet "Your Love," Hill's "Breathe" and McGraw's "Live Like You Were Dying," they became the biggest names in country by the early '00s. "The sum of their parts is far greater than each on their own," Gleason says. "They have 20 years of country hits."

On the home front the McGraw-Hill clan had its own triumphs with the births of daughters Gracie, now 21, Maggie, 19, and Audrey, 16. But Hill in particular turned her focus to parenting, especially after the dramatic birth of their youngest, Audrey, who was eight weeks premature, in 2001. "When our girls started going to school, we made a decision that they would live as normal a life as possible. I came off the road so I could be there at home for them," says Hill. "We made a choice to do it that way, and we don't regret it for a second. They come first no matter what." So Hill took a break from recording after her 2005 album Fireflies to become a full-time mom and a regular at school drop-offs and pickups. "Family's been their priority 100 percent," says friend and songwriter Lori McKenna. "That's her heart."

'HE INSPIRES ME EVERY DAY IN MANY WAYS'

ROAD TO ROMANCE
"We were young and silly and goo-goo-eyed in love," McGraw said about falling for each other on tour in 1996.

STARS ALIGNED
"Tim has given me confidence. He makes me feel like I can conquer the world," Hill (onstage with McGraw in 1996) has said.

Tim McGraw
I love you!
The only place in my world is with you and my girls
Faith Hill
Never better baby!!!! Happy 50th Birthday my love. This world is a better place because of you!

SWEET TWEETS

The couple don't shy away from Twitter love. "Tim has the biggest heart in the world," Hill has said.

MIRROR IMAGE

On their 20th anniversary Hill declared her love for McGraw on a mirror, the same way she accepted his marriage proposal.

WAY TO HER HEART?

"What a man!" Hill gushed on her Instagram of McGraw's culinary skills.

HOME-BODIES

"There's so much laughter in our house. I'm not saying that we don't bicker and fight sometimes. We are a typical family, but through it all there's laughter," Hill told People in 2011.

When the couple set out on tour in 2006, it was a family affair, with all the girls tagging along. "We made sure that we had spaces for the kids to play, do homework," says Hill; they also carved out time for field trips and crafting. "I remembered seeing Faith in a lawn chair helping her kids paint, and I'm like, 'Oh, she's a housewife just like I am,'" says McKenna. "And she really is. It's just that she looks and can sing like Faith Hill!"

Between stints coaching basketball for his girls and cheering from the sidelines, McGraw was testing out his acting skills in films like Friday Night Lights and The Blind Side and hitting the road on solo tours. And as in most marriages, there were challenges. "We're both human beings—it's not always peachy and rosy," Hill has told People. "We don't work to be in love, but sometimes we don't get along. I think you've got to really like the person you are with, and he has to be the one you want to hang out with more than anybody else."

That commitment—and his wife's urging—led McGraw to quit drinking in 2008. "I can go down a dark road sometimes," McGraw admitted to People in a cover story in 2009 of his battle with alcohol. "Faith saved my life in a lot of ways. She makes me a better man." Better and maybe even sexier—with a strict diet and fitness regimen he has dropped 40 lbs. since his last drink.

Now, with two daughters away at college and one halfway through high school, the couple are preparing for an empty nest. "The girls are old enough now that if Mom and Dad want to focus on the music together, it's less of a problem and more of a kick," says Gleason. Judging from social media, the duo clearly continue to get quite a kick out of each other. "You give good smooch face. I love you," Hill tweeted to her husband when he turned 51 in May. And though he's known for pulling out all the stops for her (surprise birthday party aboard the Onassis yacht in Greece, anyone?), they're now finding joy in the little things. "Funny, as we get older it's less about the big gestures and more about spending time together at home," says McGraw. "For our 20th wedding anniversary we stayed in our pajamas and watched TV. It was very low-key, and we loved it." —with reporting from Emily Davies

The former Suits star's transformation into the Duchess of Sussex is the ultimate modern-day fairy tale. From including the words of Martin Luther King Jr. in her May 19 wedding to Prince Harry to featuring the state flower of California on her official coat of arms, this American princess, 36, is staying true to her roots—and forever changing the royal family. Also thrust into the spotlight with her is her mom, Doria Ragland, 61, who gracefully navigated her first meeting with the Queen and took part in one of the most touching moments of the royal wedding, when Prince Charles reached for her hand as they left St. George's Chapel. "The world needed to see that," says Meghan's longtime friend and makeup artist Daniel Martin. "We wanted to see that unity."

When Matt Lauer was fired on Nov. 29 for alleged inappropriate sexual behavior, Today was thrust into the rockiest period of its 66-year history—but Kotb, 53, and Guthrie, 46, never let the turmoil dent their morning cheer. Kotb filled in for Lauer after his dismissal, and on Jan. 2 she and Guthrie were named the program's first all-female anchor duo. "We're grateful to NBC for not having some old-fashioned notion about what should be," says Guthrie. Adds Kotb: "We're sort of like sisters, and everybody wants a sister."

BEYONCE & JAY-Z

The iconic couple are on the road again—and still full of surprises! On June 16, during the London stop of their On the Run II Tour, Beyoncé and Jay-Z dropped a secret album, Everything Is Love, their first LP as a couple. The nine songs are quintessentially Carter: cryptic, catchy, excessive and confessional. The pair were given private access to the Louvre in Paris, where they shot the video for "Apes---" in front of Leonardo da Vinci's Mona Lisa, the Winged Victory of Samothrace and other masterpieces. "I can't believe we made it," raps Beyoncé, 36, two years after her very public marital woes with Jay, 48, with whom she shares daughter Blue Ivy, 6, and 1-year-old twins Rumi and Sir. "We did the hard work of going to therapy," Jay told David Letterman this spring. "We love each other. We put in the work."

INDICATIONS AND IMPORTANT SAFETY INFORMATION

The FreeStyle Libre Flash Glucose Monitoring system is a continuous glucose monitoring (CGM) device indicated for replacing blood glucose testing and detecting trends and tracking patterns aiding in the detection of episodes of hyperglycemia and hypoglycemia, facilitating both acute and long-term therapy adjustments in persons (age 18 and older) with diabetes. The system is intended for single patient use and requires a prescription.

CONTRAINDICATIONS: Remove the sensor before MRI, CT scan, X-ray, or diathermy treatment.

WARNINGS/LIMITATIONS: Do not ignore symptoms that may be due to low or high blood glucose, hypoglycemic unawareness, or dehydration. Check sensor glucose readings with a blood glucose meter when Check Blood Glucose symbol appears, when symptoms do not match system readings, or when readings are suspected to be inaccurate. The FreeStyle Libre system does not have alarms unless the sensor is scanned, and the system contains small parts that may be dangerous if swallowed. The FreeStyle Libre system is not approved for pregnant women, persons on dialysis, or critically-ill population. Sensor placement is not approved for sites other than the back of the arm and standard precautions for transmission of blood borne pathogens should be taken. The built-in blood glucose meter is not for use on dehydrated, hypotensive, in shock, hyperglycemic-hyperosmolar state, with or without ketosis, neonates, critically-ill patients, or for diagnosis or screening of diabetes. THE LATE LATE SHOW'S James Corden on Life, Love & Laughter

By JESS CAGLE

This week James Corden has been in London for a series of live episodes of The Late Late Show—and the British-born host looks forward to returning to the U.K. full-time someday. "We're a really long way away from people who are getting older," says Corden, who turns 40 this summer. "It plays on my mind, the relationship that my children might have with their families and cousins and uncles and grandparents." Corden currently lives in Los Angeles, where he and wife Julia Carey are raising their three kids: son Max, 7, daughter Carey, 3, and baby girl Charlotte, 6 months. Meanwhile Corden—who was a big star in the U.K. on stage and TV before becoming a talk show host in the U.S. in 2015—continues to produce some of Hollywood's most inspired late-night programming, including Carpool Karaoke, which has hundreds of millions of views on YouTube. The Emmy-winning host opened up to People's editor-in-chief for the latest episode of The Jess Cagle Interview about his career, his family and juggling them both. Here are some excerpts.

"The only really bad choice she ever made is marrying me. She's that smart," jokes Corden about wife Julia Carey.

Corden in 1988.

On his pal Prince Harry and the royal wedding

Corden's friendship with the prince began "out and about at the same places in London," says Corden. Asked about reports that he dressed as Henry VIII for a postwedding dinner, Corden says, "Harry asked if I would do a performance of some kind. And so I did it. I wasn't really dressed as Henry VIII; I was just dressed in a kind of Tudor outfit. But I guess I look a bit like Henry VIII."

On realizing he was born for the stage

"My sister's christening was taking place. I was 4. . . . I can remember like it was yesterday, looking out on this congregation of people, and I just started doing silly things, pulling faces and turning around and looking back through my legs. And everyone was sort of laughing and seemed to be enjoying it. The thing I remember most is not really the feeling of being on the stage, it's the feeling of when the christening had finished, going back down to the congregation and thinking . . . 'It feels great up there and kind of boring down here, and all the rest of my life shall be a quest to try to be up there as much as possible.' "

On early fame and wild nights

The British series Gavin & Stacey (2007-2010) made Corden famous when he was still in his 20s. "It was a strange time," he says. "I lived with a girlfriend for eight years, and we broke up. If you're heartbroken and then very quickly become famous, that is a potent mix. . . . It was really [a matter of] I can either stay in and be really sad, or I can go out where people seem to really enjoy when I'm around. I chose to do the latter. And I basically went out for about eight months and didn't really come back. . . . All of those experiences have put skin on my bones. And so I'm thankful for all of it, however dark it may have felt."

Hitting the Road

For a Crosswalk the Musical sketch with Andew Lloyd Webber, Corden dressed as Eva Perón in Evita and belted tunes in the middle of a London intersection. "The most surreal thing I've ever seen," says Corden. Filming Carpool Karaoke with Paul McCartney (below) was "the most incredible day I've ever had."

On meeting his future wife in 2009

Dominic Cooper, his roommate and costar in The History Boys, introduced them when Julia worked for Save the Children. "Dominic said, 'This is Jules.' And I said, 'You might be the most beautiful woman in the world.' . . . And that was it. We both sat in the corner . . . and we very jokingly planned the rest of our lives together."

On raising three kids

"On Sunday we thought, 'Let's take the kids out. Let's go for lunch.' We went to a place at the end of our road, and we looked like we were fleeing the country. . . . The bags and the stroller and the baby here, and there are wipes everywhere. . . . You're just shoveling pasta and butter into one of their mouths as you're trying to eat yours. You have to leave a huge tip because the place is covered in crayons. . . . That's the truth, but I wouldn't have it any other way."

MILES OF NOTHING

Tara (inset, ca. 1985) went missing while heading back home from a bike ride on Highway 47 near her home in Rio Communities, N.Mex.

30-YEAR-OLD COLD CASE: NEW DETAILS

WHAT HAPPENED TO TARA?

Almost 3 decades after 19-year-old Tara Calico vanished near her rural New Mexico home, police may be close to solving the mystery of her disappearance—and to giving answers to her anguished loved ones By ADAM CARLSON

On the morning of Sept. 20, 1988, 19-year-old Tara Calico took her Walkman cassette player and a Boston tape, climbed on her mom's 10-speed pink Huffy bicycle and headed out for a long bike ride in the desert around her home in Rio Communities, N.Mex. The college sophomore often pedaled as far as 35 miles round-trip. She liked the exercise and could soak up solitude and the beautiful scenery sprawled beyond an open expanse of highway surrounded by miles of desert. As she took off, Tara called out to her mom, Patty, her stepsister Michele Doel remembers. "She said, 'Mom, if I don't come home, something happened to my bike. Come get me.'"

They were the last words Tara's family ever heard her speak. For nearly three decades the family has been haunted by the events of that morning and wondering why the charming, intelligent young woman who was studying psychology at the University of New Mexico never returned home. In 1989 they thought they had found a clue: a disturbing photograph, found by a woman at a convenience store in Florida, showed a girl who looked like Tara tied up in the back of a van. Tara's mother was convinced it was her daughter—but authorities who analyzed the image disagreed. Now, however, police and the FBI have what they believe to be credible leads that could finally bring closure to the most baffling mystery this sleepy rural community has ever seen. "It's a very solvable case," says Valencia Sgt. Joseph Rowland, the lead investigator. "There are some local suspects that are currently under investigation."

HORROR & HOPE

When Tara didn't return home from that fateful bike ride 30 years ago, authorities launched a massive search by land, air and water—including the nearby Rio Grande River—but found only bike tracks leading nowhere. Days into the investigation, police located a sun-bleached cassette tape and broken pieces of a Walkman, but they led nowhere. And intermittent storms washed away other potential evidence. "I knew—my parents knew immediately—that [it was] foul play," recalls Tara's older brother Chris, now 52. "We didn't have any idea what."

'TARA IS ONE OF OUR OWN THAT WE'VE NEVER WANTED TO GIVE UP ON'
—SGT. JOSEPH ROWLAND, LEAD INVESTIGATOR

As the mystery stretched on, Tara's family refused to wait passively for news. Her mother and her stepfather, John Doel, took the extraordinary step of becoming deputized in Valencia County, compiling police records and chasing leads from state to state. Patty and John kept hoping Tara would be found alive and stocked her bedroom with new gifts for every birthday and Christmas that went by. In 2006, after years of declining health, Patty died of complications following a series of strokes. "[John] and I finally had closure that Tara was dead," says Chris. "But Mom never did. She would constantly have dreams that Tara was home and then wake up in tears."

The toll Tara's disappearance took on the family affected her stepsister Michele, 45, so much that in 2010 she and Tara's high school pal Melinda Esquibel began scouring police files and reinterviewing witnesses in an effort to keep the case alive. Last year Esquibel launched the podcast Vanished: The Tara Calico Investigation and insists she and Michele are getting closer to locating Tara's remains. "I want to know where she is," says Michele. "I also want somebody to pay for it."

So does former Valencia sheriff Rene Rivera, who was the lead investigator on the case from 1996 to 2007. Rivera says it's likely that Tara was killed by teenage boys she knew. In 2008 he told the Albuquerque Journal that he believed that the parents of those boys were complicit in hiding the truth about what had happened to Tara. According to police reports, Tara had been receiving "threatening" notes on her car windshield in the months before she disappeared, and multiple witnesses have reported Tara was followed by a pickup truck the day she went missing. "Somebody out there knows something," says FBI Supervisory Special Agent Ben Bourgeois.

For those closest to Tara, that there may finally be answers about her fate—and someone brought to justice for it—would mean some measure of peace. "She was a good person, very sweet, very smart," says Tara's friend Janie Evans. "If anyone knows anything, come forward and let the family know.... It's more than just closure; the not-knowing is the worst part." ●

GONE TOO SOON

Friends and family say Tara (above and right, ca. 1987, and in missing poster, left) was determined to embrace life after being seriously injured in a car wreck in high school. "She wanted to do things on her own," her brother Chris says.

If you have any information about Tara Calico's disappearance, contact the Valencia County Sheriff's Office at 505-866-2400 or the FBI at 1-800-CALL-FBI or online at tips.fbi.gov

MIKE'S WORLD

The Gong Show star opens up about his hiatus from Hollywood, fatherhood and—yeah, baby!—bringing back Austin Powers

By GILLIAN TELLING

Every Halloween night Mike Myers loves to swing by the Greenwich Village parade near his home in New York City and watch how many people walk by dressed up as the famous characters he's created throughout his career. "It's the most gratifying thing ever," he says. "There will be like 20 Austin Powerses. A bunch of Waynes. A dog or a baby dressed as Garth. It's endlessly flattering and satisfying, because you make up these characters that you might think are funny but have no idea anyone else ever would. And then it becomes this…thing."

Though the Toronto-born Myers, 55, has been creating these "things" for 30 years, he says he sees no reason to stop now—and he'd happily do Austin Powers 4 or a Dr. Evil film. He also claims his current role as Tommy Maitland, the gregarious host of ABC's Gong Show revival, is one of his favorites. "He's just a fun character," Myers says of dressing up as Maitland, who is modeled after cheeky old-school British-television presenters. "Those guys are just so iconic and beloved over there. They're truly fixtures in everyone's lives. I just wanted to channel that kind of energy." The character also features a thread of the comedian's own father, Eric, an insurance salesman originally from Liverpool, who died in 1991. "My dad liked to have a good time and was very silly," Myers recalls. "Whenever you told him something crappy had happened, he'd say, 'Well, how fast can you find the silly?' And [Maitland] looks a little bit like him." As far as rebooting the '70s variety show, which showcases real people revealing their most ludicrous talents (for example, an opera singer stuffing her face with cake while singing), Myers says it simply satisfies his obsession with "absurd, silly, crazy comedy."

For the past six years the actor has been more quiet than silly and crazy—for good reason. "I always wanted to have a family," says Myers. He and his second wife, Kelly Tisdale, 41, are parents to son Spike, 6, and daughters Sunday, 4, and Paulina, 2. "I have three beautiful kids. I can't believe my luck, I really can't. It's the happiest time of my life. And it's been hard to leave the house. So the last six years has really been hanging with them." In 2013 he did produce the documentary Supermensch: The Legend of Shep Gordon, about a Hollywood manager who is just famously nice. ("He likes to be nice for no good reason other than it's nice to be nice," says Myers. "That was an important message.") Still, he did it only because he could work from home. "I made it in a studio out of my house so I could see the kids throughout the day," he says. "I could take a Spike break whenever he rolled in on his wagon."

Myers says he decided early on that he would tell his kids what Daddy does for a living—and one of the best moments of his life was watching Austin Powers with Spike recently. "It was one of those crazy summer rains, and we were snuggled under a blanket," he says. "Spike whispers, 'Can I tell you a secret?' Then he goes, 'I'm your No. 1 fan.' I literally couldn't handle it. 'I'm your No. 1 fan?' I mean, stick a fork in me, dude. I'm done." ●

ELIZABETH PERKINS

My Battle with Type 1 Diabetes

WHEN THE ACTRESS STARTED FEELING TIRED 13 YEARS AGO, SHE HAD NO IDEA IT WAS A SYMPTOM OF A SERIOUS AUTOIMMUNE DISEASE

By GILLIAN TELLING

In the spring of 2005 Elizabeth Perkins had just wrapped filming the first season of Weeds when she started feeling incredibly fatigued. "I just wasn't myself," says the actress, 57. "I was so thirsty and losing weight. I thought I had some sort of mononucleosis." She went to the doctor for a routine blood test and found herself being rushed to the hospital in an ambulance. "The doctor told me my blood sugar was 640. Normal is 100," she says. "Boom. I had diabetes."

But unlike many adults who develop diabetes in midlife, Perkins was diagnosed not with type 2—a resistance to insulin that can be common in people who are overweight—but with late-onset autoimmune type 1 diabetes, a disorder in which the immune system attacks the cells in the

Lifelong Challenge
"It was a huge adjustment to know that I'll have this the rest of my life," says Perkins.

Adult-Onset Type 1 Diabetes
Officially called latent autoimmune diabetes of adulthood (LADA), type 1 diabetes occurs in adults when the pancreas suddenly stops producing insulin. "It's not fully understood why," says Dr. Carol Levy, Director of the Mount Sinai Diabetes Center in New York. "There could be genetic markers or environmental triggers, but patients are usually not overweight." Symptoms include excessive thirst and urination, fatigue and unexplained weight loss.

pancreas that make insulin. Only 5 to 10 percent of diabetics have this form of the disease. "It's so bizarrely rare," she says. "I stopped producing insulin. I'm now fully insulin dependent."

For Perkins, who rose to fame in the '80s, starring in films such as About Last Night and Big, the diagnosis brought huge changes to both her life and career. Put on a strict regimen in which she had to inject herself with insulin five or six times a day, she immediately gained 40 lbs. "You're injecting a hormone that stores fat," she says. "I just puffed up like a basketball. I was on Weeds, and everyone saw me get bigger and bigger. It's been challenging as hell."

'People say, 'Oh with diet and exercise you can get off insulin' but no, that's the other form of diabetes'
—ELIZABETH PERKINS

But 13 years later the actress, who currently plays Mandy Moore's mom in This Is Us and an alcoholic gossip in HBO's Sharp Objects, has both her weight and the disease under control. She carries injectible insulin pens with her everywhere, since a strap-on pump interferes with the sound transmission on-set. "Everybody on-set is just used to me raising my skirt and sticking myself in the thigh," she says. "It's like breastfeeding. Sorry if it bothers you!" She closely monitors her blood-sugar levels. "First thing in the morning, last thing in the evening and four or five times in between, checking, checking, checking. It's the only way to manage it." She is also careful to stick to a low-carbohydrate diet and works out five days a week. "I have to keep my heart in check to keep my circulation going." The hardest part, she says, is knowing she will have to cope with the disease for the rest of her life. "It's a lonely disease because you're managing it all on your own. Outside you appear 100 percent fine, but inside you are battling something deadly."

One thing that hasn't suffered? Her marriage to cinematographer Julio Macat, 60. The duo of 18 years are suddenly empty-nesters now that his three sons and her daughter have grown up and left home. "It's crazy exciting," she says of the change. "You get a chance to reignite your relationship. We've discovered that we're best friends who have a fantastic time when we're alone together." And there's an added bonus to all that alone time. Perkins smiles and whispers, "We're having more sex now than we ever did!" ●

DOUBLE TALK

Bryce

'My parents made me feel like anything was possible'
—BRYCE DALLAS HOWARD

Dallas Howard & Ron Howard

IT'S HAPPY DAYS FOR THE DAD AND DAUGHTER RULING THE BIG SCREEN THIS SUMMER

By MARY GREEN

Family First Ron and Cheryl raised Bryce and her three siblings in Connecticut.

It's a hectic time in the Howard household, with two of its most famous members involved in summer blockbuster movies. But as they chat in New York City, neither Ron, 64, nor his daughter Bryce Dallas, 37, is focused on dinosaurs or the Millennium Falcon. "Is Mom going to Theo's recital?" Ron asks Bryce, making sure his grandson—Bryce's 11-year-old—will have a packed house later in the day. "Yes, I'm headed to Connecticut after this," replies Bryce. "Good, I'll see you tonight," says Ron. Despite their busy careers—Oscar-winning director Ron helmed Solo: A Star Wars Story, and Bryce stars in Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom—they say their main priority has always been keeping family close.

Ron, what was the most over-the-top rule you had for your four kids?

RON We had no over-the-top rules. Do you disagree, daughter?

BRYCE We had a goat barn, and I was responsible for it at a very young age.... Every weekend, like the whole weekend. You guys made sure that we weren't spoiled. You had to throw some manual labor in there.

What's your favorite movie or TV show that the other has done?

BRYCE Parenthood. I was 7 years old, and I had a baby crush on Leaf Phoenix, who became Joaquin. And one day I was watching Steve Martin make balloon animals—what a fun thing!

RON For sheer fun, Jurassic. You're running from dinosaurs and telling jokes and doing emotional stuff. That's a great combination.

Will you two ever work together onscreen?

RON Now that Cheryl [his wife of more than 40 years] and I are empty nesters, maybe one of these days I'll do some acting again. The only thing I would make time for would be something that Bryce was directing. I'm kind of secretly curious how tough of a taskmaster she'd be on her old dad.

Dynamic Duo Bryce stars with Chris Pratt in Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom, six weeks after Ron's Solo hit theaters. "I'm kinda pinching myself it worked out this way," says Ron.

BOTTOM: UNIVERSAL STUDIOS AND AMBLIN ENTERTAINMENT, INC. AND LEGENDARY PICTURES PRODUCTIONS, LLC

BRYCE There is a project that hopefully is going to happen soon.

Bryce, do your kids Theo, 11, and Beatrice, 6, watch your dad's work?

BRYCE They've seen the Andy Griffith Show—it's a great show. I don't think they've seen Happy Days yet.

RON The other day, when I was FaceTiming the family, Theo said, "I just saw Apollo 13." I could tell he really liked it, and that meant the world to me.

What are the most important life lessons you've learned from each other?

BRYCE My parents made me feel like anything was possible, but that it was also okay if things weren't going well. Eventually, though it might take days, months or years, things will settle.

RON I learned how much harder this business is for women than men. The other thing she taught me, in her own very gracious way, is to not take no for an answer. She's better at that than I've ever been.

Bryce, what do you appreciate most about your parents?

BRYCE There's a resilience and a humility. They don't have high expectations of the world. They have high expectations of themselves. So they don't go through life with a sense of entitlement.

Ron, what do you admire most about your kids?

RON One hopes each generation gets better and smarter. Cheryl and I really feel that way about Bryce, [her husband] Seth and our other kids. They know more. They ask better, deeper questions. ●

BATTLING A DEADLY DISEASE

Saving Our Sons

WHEN THEIR SONS BENNY AND JOSH WERE DIAGNOSED WITH A FATAL GENETIC DISORDER, JENNIE AND GARY LANDSMAN RAISED MORE THAN $1.1 MILLION TO FIND A CURE

By K.C. BAKER Photographs by JOEL BARHAMAND

A Family's Fight

For Jennie Landsman every waking minute with her two younger sons—Benny, 2, and Josh, 11 months—is special. Whether she's cuddling with Benny during story time or coaxing Josh through a colicky tantrum, "they're both these delicious little guys," says Jennie, 34. "It's good to just enjoy them."

But, sadly, Jennie knows all too well how precious—and fleeting—those moments might be. Last August she and her husband, Gary Landsman, 44, learned that both boys suffer from Canavan disease—a rare, incurable and fatal genetic neuro-

Quality Time
Benny and Josh, both of whom wear corrective eyeglasses, "are happy and chill," says Jennie. Adds Gary: "They just love us and smile at us. It's hard to go off to work and leave them every morning."

logical disorder that eventually robs its young victims of the ability to see, walk, talk, even swallow. With their sons facing a life expectancy of just 5 to 10 years, the couple began a desperate search for solutions. Through contacts, they found Dr. Paola Leone, a renowned neuroscientist and director of the Cell and Gene Therapy Center at New Jersey's Rowan University School of Osteopathic Medicine. Leone had been working on a promising new genetic therapy to halt—and even reverse—Canavan's crippling symptoms. But the next step in her research—a clinical trial for the gene therapy —would cost a minimum of $1.2 million. "We knew we could either accept it and watch the death sentence play out or we could take things into our own hands," says Gary. "We had to try." In November the Landsmans launched a GoFundMe campaign with a heart-wrenching video of them and the boys pleading for help. By May they had raised an astonishing $1.15 million."I was blown away that people stepped up like they did," says Jennie, who runs a yoga and mixed-martial-arts studio near the family's home. "We aren't quite there yet," adds Gary, "but we feel pretty good about where we are."

For Jennie and Gary—who first hit it off at a friend's Thanksgiving dinner in 2013—kids were always a part of the plan. Married in March 2015, they had Benny in June 2016. (Jennie also has a son, Michael Heiney, 8, from her first marriage.) "It was a lifelong dream coming true," says Gary, who opened his own wine shop shortly after he and Jennie met. For the first six months Benny seemed healthy. Then, says Jennie, "he kind of plateaued. He wasn't sitting up and he wasn't reaching very well for things. Babies do a new trick every day, but there was nothing new happening." Jennie, who was pregnant with Josh, shuttled Benny through seven months of tests and doctor's appointments. Finally in August 2017 Benny was diagnosed with Canavan. "[The doctor] said, 'This is a fatal disease; there is nothing you can do,'" recalls Jennie. "I died in that minute. I couldn't even process what I was hearing." Adding to their heartbreak was the news that Josh—who'd been born just four weeks earlier—also had the disease. Unbeknownst to Jennie and Gary, they are both carriers for Canavan, which meant the boys each had a 25 percent chance of having the disorder. "We were devastated. It was a dark time," says Gary. Adds Jennie: "To hear that there's nothing you can do and your children are going to have a slow death—I didn't want to be in this world anymore.'"

'She said, "It's a fatal disease. There's nothing you can do." I died in that minute'
—JENNIE LANDSMAN

After weeks of debilitating depression, Jennie finally found the strength to go on. She was holding Benny one day, completely broken, trying to rock him to sleep—"and he starts laughing," she says. "I said, 'This is so crazy that I'm sitting here thinking about the end, and I'm not enjoying this amazing little guy who's right here, right now. If all he has is this broken mother, that's not fair.' So I decided, 'Enough is enough.'"

Jennie joined various support groups and through her network found Dr. Leone, who was ready to help as long as the Landsmans could raise the money to fund the trial. "That was a lot to ask," admits Dr. Leone. "But she stood there holding Benny and said, 'I can do it.'"

In the coming months Benny and Josh—and three other children with Canavan—are scheduled to undergo the treatment with Dr. Leone's colleague Dr. Christopher Janson, a neurologist at the University of Illinois at Chicago. While they likely won't know if the therapy is working for at least three months, the hope, says Dr. Leone, "is that they will have full, functional lives." As additional costs continue to mount, the Landsmans plan to keep fund-raising and sharing the results of their trial to help other children with Canavan. "So that getting this done for the next family will hopefully be quick," says Jennie. Adds Gary: "We want a full cure. That's our goal. There's nothing brave or courageous or amazing about what we're doing. To me, this is what any parent would do." ●

Pay It Forward
"This is an ongoing mission that Jennie and I will have for the rest of our lives," says Gary (with Jennie, Josh, Benny and Michael at home).

Curing Canavan Disease?

Canavan disease is an inherited genetic disorder found most often in those of Ashkenazi Jewish descent. The lack of an essential enzyme prevents the formation of normal white matter (myelin), which reduces the brain's ability to send and receive nerve signals. Symptoms, which appear in infancy, include limited motor skills, floppy muscle tone and blindness. While there's still no cure, according to Dr. Leone—whose genetic therapy has already proved successful in mice—there's real reason to be hopeful. When their clinical trial begins, Benny and Josh will undergo a surgical procedure to inject a genetically engineered virus—designed to help develop white matter—directly into their brains. "Time is of the essence," says Dr. Leone. "But our hope is that the children will begin to develop myelin and [regain] their motor functions."

SIMON'S SECOND ACT

After the heights of TV stardom, Aussie actor Simon Baker explores a new passion with his movie Breath—and savors 20 years of marriage By KARA WARNER

Like many young Australian actors, Simon Baker headed to L.A. with hopes of Hollywood success—but he only had two months to make it big. "My bank account set a time limit for me," Baker remembers of his 1996 move from Sydney with his now-wife, Rebecca Rigg, and their 3-year-old daughter Stella in tow. "We said, 'Let's go out for a while. We'll call it a holiday if nothing happens.'"

What happened is that Baker almost immediately booked a role in the acclaimed movie L.A. Confidential alongside fellow up-and-comers Russell Crowe and Guy Pearce—and he never looked back. Two decades later, after headlining two hit TV series (CBS's The Guardian and The Mentalist), Baker, 48, took on another bold experiment: directing his first feature film, the coming-of-age surfing drama Breath. The drama spoke to him as a dad of two teenage boys—Claude, 19, and Harry, 16—along with Stella, now 24, and, he says, "I wanted to put two things that I love together: surfing and filmmaking."

HUMBLE ROOTS

Baker (above at age 11) credits his wife of two decades, Rebecca Rigg, with keeping his ego in check: "She's great at making fun of me and supporting me at the same time."

Growing up in the small surfing town of Lennox Head, Baker saw the waves as an "escape." His mom, a high school English and drama teacher, and his dad, a mechanic, divorced when he was young, and his family didn't have much money. "I loved photography, and I loved cameras, but we didn't have a pot to piss in," he says. "I was happy if I could get lunch, let alone a camera." He turned to surfing as his creative outlet "to get away from awkward circumstances," he says. "I developed a trust and confidence in myself physically. That was a big part of my sanity as a kid." He lucked into acting success in his early 20s by landing a role on the Aussie soap E Street, where he and Rigg played onscreen love interests. "I'm not really sure that I even wanted to be a performer. It just kind of happened," he says. "And then I was making a living, faking stuff in front of a camera."

After living together for five years, Baker and Rigg, 51, wed in 1998. "We're a team. We're really great friends. The most important thing in our relationship is we're able to be ourselves," he says. And they're not big on celebrating anniversaries, though their 20th is coming up this October. "Anniversaries, they're an odd thing, aren't they? I have some friends that are very strict about anniversaries of everything. There was one year, I think, that we went out to dinner and I bought a gift and we had an argument—because I think we put too much pressure on it. If we're not spontaneous, we don't feel like we're ourselves."

Baker credits his wife with encouraging him to take the risk of directing. "She said, 'There's a lot of crap films made. Who cares if yours is just another one? Just make it!'" he says with a laugh. Over the years, despite roles in movies such as The Devil Wears Prada and Something New, he had gravitated to TV so he could come home to his family in L.A. every day. "Once the kids started getting older and into school, I didn't want to leave," he says.

With his kids growing up—Stella is a Yale School of Drama graduate—Baker felt he could dedicate the time to make Breath, filmed on Australia's west coast. "I feel really proud that we actually were able to pull it off," he says of the movie, which has already earned him an Australian Directors Guild award. Next on his to-do list? Some R&R with his family—"We live by the beach and get into the water most days"—and some free time to put into his new hobby: growing veggies. "I like gardening," he says. "It's nurturing. As my kids get older, I have to find things to put love into, and gardening is good for that. And my dog. And my wife. And maybe another film." ●

STAR-MAKING ROLES

The Mentalist (left, with Brianna Brown) turned Baker into a TV icon, but The Devil Wears Prada (right, with Anne Hathaway) impressed his daughter the most. "She said, 'It's probably the only movie of yours I'd ever go and see.'"

GABY DALKIN

Chocolate Brownie Flag Cake

THE AUTHOR OF WHAT'S GABY COOKING: EVERYDAY CALIFORNIA FOOD CALLS THIS DESSERT 'A TOTAL CROWD-PLEASER'

- 2½ cups granulated sugar
- 1½ cups unsweetened Dutch process cocoa
- 1 tsp. kosher salt
- 1½ cups (12 oz.) unsalted butter, at room temperature, divided
- 1½ Tbsp. vanilla extract, divided
- 4 large eggs
- 1 cup (about 4¼ oz.) all-purpose flour
- 1 cup dark-chocolate chips
- 1 (8-oz.) pkg. cream cheese, at room temperature
- 3½ cups (about 14 oz.) powdered sugar, divided
- 5 cups fresh raspberries (about 1¼ lbs.)
- ½ cup fresh blueberries (about 3 oz.)

1. Preheat oven to 350°. Line a 13x9-inch baking pan with aluminum foil, leaving a 2-inch overhang on all sides. Spray foil with cooking spray.

2. Combine sugar, cocoa, salt and 1¼ cups butter in a medium saucepan over medium heat. Cook, stirring often, until butter is melted, about 6 minutes. Remove from heat, and stir in 1 tablespoon vanilla. Add eggs, 1 at a time, stirring well after each addition. Add flour, and stir until smooth. Fold in chocolate chips. Spoon batter into prepared pan, and bake in oven until a wooden pick inserted in the center comes out clean, about 35 minutes. Transfer to a wire rack to cool completely, about 1 hour.

3. Using foil as handles, lift brownies out of pan. Transfer to a serving plate; discard foil.

4. Beat together cream cheese and remaining ¼ cup butter in bowl of a heavy-duty stand mixer on medium speed until creamy, about 2 minutes. Gradually add 2 cups powdered sugar, beating until smooth. Stir in remaining 1½ teaspoons vanilla. Using an offset spatula, spread frosting over top of cooled brownies.

5. Toss half of the raspberries and a handful of the blueberries in remaining 1½ cups powdered sugar. Arrange blueberries in a square in upper left corner of brownies, using sugar-coated berries as "stars." Arrange raspberries in rows, alternating uncoated and sugar-coated berries in horizontal lines on brownie to create "stripes."

Tie-Dye Cheesecake Stars

THE CAKE BOSS STAR'S CUTE CONFECTIONS ARE BEAMING WITH PRIDE

- 1 (13.5-oz.) pkg. graham cracker crumbs
- ½ tsp. ground cinnamon
- 1½ cups granulated sugar, divided
- ¾ cup (6 oz.) unsalted butter, melted
- 1 lb. cream cheese, at room temperature
- 12 oz. (1½ cups) whole-milk ricotta cheese
- ½ Tbsp. vanilla extract
- 3 large eggs
- ¼ cup heavy cream
- ½ tsp. red food-coloring gel
- ½ tsp. blue food-coloring gel

1. Preheat oven to 325°. Stir together graham cracker crumbs, cinnamon and ½ cup sugar in a large bowl. Stir in butter until incorporated. Line a 9x13-inch baking dish with aluminum foil; lightly coat with cooking spray. Press graham cracker mixture into bottom of baking dish. Bake in oven until crust is lightly browned around the edges, about 18 minutes. Transfer to a wire rack to cool completely, about 30 minutes. (Do not turn oven off.)

2. Beat cream cheese and remaining 1 cup sugar in the bowl of an electric stand mixer on medium speed until smooth, about 3 minutes. Add ricotta and vanilla; beat until combined, about 20 seconds. Add eggs, 1 at a time, beating well after each addition, stopping to scrape down sides of bowl as needed. Drizzle in heavy cream, beating on low speed until incorporated.

3. Transfer 1 cup white batter in mixer bowl to a small bowl; add ½ teaspoon red food-coloring gel, and stir to incorporate. Transfer an additional 1 cup white batter from mixer bowl to a separate small bowl; add ½ teaspoon blue food-coloring gel, and stir to incorporate. Pour remaining white batter in mixer bowl over cooled graham cracker crust. Drizzle with red and blue batters. Using a wooden skewer, swirl white, red and blue batters together. Bake until sides are set and center jiggles slightly, about 30 minutes.

4. Transfer baking dish to a wire rack to cool to room temperature, about 2 hours. Transfer to freezer until firm, about 2 hours.

5. Carefully remove firmed cheesecake from baking dish. Press a 4-inch star-shaped cookie cutter onto top of cheesecake to make indentions of star shapes. Cut stars out using a paring knife. Serve bars chilled.

Serves: 6 Active time: 40 minutes
Total time: 1 hour, 40 minutes, plus chilling time

Which Dye Is Right?

LIQUID
Sold in tiny squeeze bottles, it's the cheapest and easiest to find. Because it's water-based, colors are the least intense—so use it to make pastel shades. If you use too much, it can dilute the recipe.

DRY
Powder dye is the most versatile and vibrant: Add it to dry mixtures (like cake mix), stir it with a few drops of clear alcohol to paint details on fondant or dust directly on treats for a bold finish.

GEL
The concentrated paste is ideal for tinting large batches, like cookie dough or icing—or the cream-cheese batter in this recipe. It creates deep, saturated colors with a small amount.

SHERRY YARD

Rhubarb Galette

THE JAMES BEARD AWARD-WINNING CHEF, WHO OVERSEES DINING AT IPIC THEATERS, CREATES A RUSTIC, FAIL-PROOF TART

- 1 lb. rhubarb, cut into 2-in. long slices
- ¼ cup granulated sugar
- 1 Tbsp. ginger juice
- ¼ tsp. kosher salt
- 1 (14.1-oz.) pkg. refrigerated piecrusts
- 1 large egg, lightly beaten
- 3 Tbsp. turbinado sugar, divided
- 2 Tbsp. cold unsalted butter, cubed
- 12 amaretto cookies, crushed

1. Place oven rack in middle position of oven. Preheat oven to 425°. Line a large rimmed baking sheet with parchment paper. Toss together rhubarb pieces, granulated sugar, ginger juice and salt in a bowl; set aside.
2. Unroll 1 piecrust onto a lightly floured work surface. Lightly brush top of piecrust with beaten egg, reserving remaining beaten egg. Place remaining piecrust on top; gently press down to adhere together. Roll into a 14-inch circle. Transfer to prepared baking sheet.
3. Arrange rhubarb pieces in a zigzag or chevron pattern on surface of rolled piecrust, leaving a 2-inch border. Fold edges of piecrust dough over rhubarb pieces. Sprinkle rhubarb with 2 tablespoons of the turbinado sugar; dot with cubed butter. Brush dough with remaining beaten egg; sprinkle dough with remaining 1 tablespoon turbinado sugar.
4. Bake in preheated oven until crust is golden brown, 20 to 25 minutes. Remove from oven; cool slightly, about 10 minutes.
5. Top with crushed amaretto cookies. Serve with vanilla ice cream and fresh cherries, if desired.
Serves: 8 Active time: 15 minutes
Total time: 50 minutes

Quick Tip
Make your own ginger juice: Grate a 3-in. piece of fresh ginger over a bowl, and press through a fine wire-mesh sieve.

ADRIENNE CHEATHAM

Frozen Mojito Fruit Pops

MAKE THESE SPIKED TREATS FAMILY-FRIENDLY BY OMITTING THE RUM, SUGGESTS THE TOP CHEF STAR AND HOST OF HARLEM'S SUNDAY BEST POP-UP SERIES

- 1 cup fresh blueberries
- 1 cup sliced fresh strawberries
- 2 Tbsp. thinly sliced fresh mint
- 1½ oz. light rum, divided
- 1 pt. lemon sorbet, softened, divided
- 1 cup strawberry sorbet, softened
- 10 wooden pop sticks

1. Place blueberries in 1 medium bowl and strawberries in a second medium bowl. Add 1 tablespoon mint and 1 tablespoon rum to each bowl, and toss. Let berry mixtures stand 5 minutes.
2. Stir 1 cup lemon sorbet into blueberry mixture, crushing berries slightly. Stir strawberry sorbet into strawberry mixture. Stir together remaining 1 tablespoon rum and 1 cup lemon sorbet in a third medium bowl.
3. Divide strawberry mixture among 10 (2½-ounce) ice-pop molds, filling one-third full. Top evenly with lemon-sorbet-rum mixture. Finally, top evenly with blueberry mixture. Insert wooden pop sticks, and freeze until set, about 4 hours. Remove pops from molds, and serve.

our (not so) secret recipe

just sparkling water & real squeezed fruit

yup, that's it.

Kelly Preston

THE ACTRESS, 55, COSTARS WITH HER HUSBAND, JOHN TRAVOLTA, IN THE NEW MOB BIOPIC GOTTI

Last recurring dream
I'm swimming, and I get sucked up into this huge 100-ft. wave. On a couple of occasions, I've been able to fly at the top. Hopefully whatever that means is cool!

Last indulgence
We were in Hawaii and had malasadas, these Portuguese donuts, at Leonard's Bakery. You get a big bag, and you can't even leave the parking lot without eating them.

Last romantic moment
I think it's when Johnny just whisks me away, and we'll jump on the airplane and go out to dinner, and I don't know where we're going. It's good to be married to a pilot!

Last game I played
We play Chopped like the television show and have to incorporate like peanut butter and Fritos. Or we'll have a bake-off, which John always wins. He doesn't measure anything; it's so annoying.

Last fashion disaster
The one that sticks out is prom. It was a purple dress that was some kind of parachute nightmare. And I had crazy curly hair that I put in a big ol' side braid. I was rocking it, man.
